4 For the purpose of opening out a lane in this site, about 3 Ankurams of the Entrance portion of the Chattram and about 7 Ankurams of the Chattram building - 4 below and 3 ^{upper-story} ~~above~~ - will, it is learnt from the Survey Engineer, have to be dismantled and taken up in addition to the open space.

5 The Chattram Parpakhagar and a few others represented to the Survey Engineer, that the opening out^{of} a convenient lane between the Temple and the Chattram would make it a thoroughfare for all ~~wide~~ classes of people to pass through, that it greatly interferes with the taking of Nyrodhyam from the Chattram to the temple through through the Northern gate, and that-on extraordinary occasions, when a number of people have to be fed in the Chattrams, leaves are spread in the open space as well as in the temple premises, and the opening out^g a lane as proposed, would be prejudicial to this purpose also.

These representations, Mr. Sarg Sarg thought, were reasonable, and he said ^{that} he would abandon the idea of opening out a lane between the two Dusties as originally proposed, and that he would propose a Conserva--vancy lane ^{way} somewhere else. He also expressed to Mr. Sarg that a reply to his letter might be sent as early as possible.

The two Dusties are now under of the Chattram and thus to any religious as well as social

I also found that there was provision for the sale of food within the enclosure of the but the Government had decided it was unwholesome, and that and therefore was not to be for carrying on.

On Sunday, 10th June, I went to the temple and preached to the people. I found the people very attentive and I
